

12 SIMPLE METHODS

FOR IDENTIFYING A JOB OF INTEREST

- List career ideas in the past that you thought might be enjoyable.
- Research the highest-paying jobs to see if any of those interest you.
- Identify jobs people have said you'd be good at.
- List jobs you thought sounded interesting.
- List jobs you thought about doing when you were younger.
- List jobs you know involve a skill you're good at.
- List jobs you thought just sounded cool.
- List jobs you know involve a subject you enjoy.
- Research the fastest-growing jobs to see if any get your attention.
- Research the newest jobs and see if any interest you.
- List jobs your friends have mentioned that seemed interesting.
- Ask people who know you the best to share what they could see you doing.

Discover Job Anatomy™

Once you identify a job of interest, you need to learn a few things about the position so you gain a full understanding of what's actually involved and if there are any dislikes that would make you change your mind.

You can use Google searches or AI platforms like ChatGPT or Perplexity to learn the five facts of Job Anatomy.

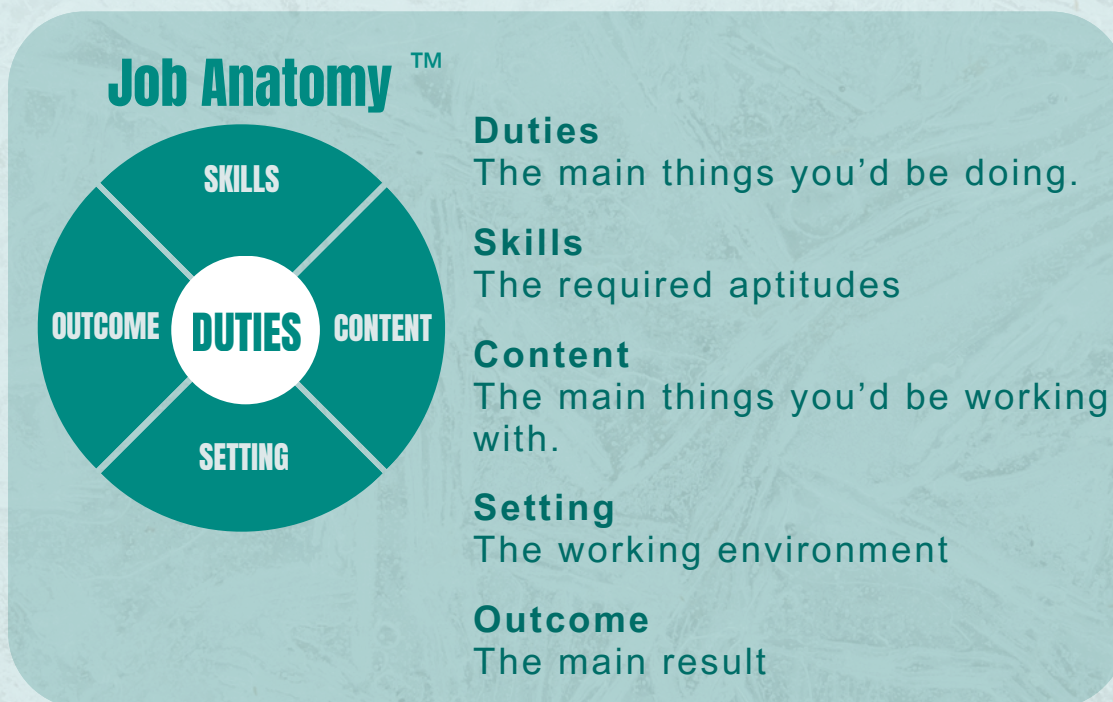

Figure it Out With a Course

If you'd like step-by-step guidance through this process and actually discover all nine of the most important things to discover about a job of interest, consider taking the Know Before You Go digital course. Click HERE to learn more or scan the code.

Figure it Out With Coaching

If you'd like to work through this process with a next-gen career guide, consider the Know Before You Go journey. In just six weeks, you can identify a job of interest, discover the Job Anatomy™, and evaluate if the position feels like a fit. You can click HERE to learn more or scan the code.